(Jackson, MS) – Governor Ronnie Musgrove’s office negotiates its cell phone contract on a regular basis in an effort to find the most economic plan. The use of cell phones was questioned in a recent article by the Associated Press.

“We are always looking for ways to make our state dollars go as far as possible, and finding the best cell phone plan is one way to do that,” said Felicia Gavin, Director of Administration for Musgrove’s office. “The people of Mississippi expect us to do that, and we are going to meet their expectations.”

Musgrove’s office cooperated fully with the Associated Press in its story, releasing six months’ worth of cell phone records under the Freedom of Information Act.
