

“Children’s museums are invaluable because they provide a stimulating, interactive, and hands-on environment for our children and their families to learn together and to spend quality time together,” said Musgrove. “The construction of a children’s museum in the Capitol City will show our continued commitment to our children and to their bright futures. Our children would greatly benefit from a place they could call their own and where their formal education at school could be reinforced through play and organized activities.”