

Robert Clark stood alone but tall when he first came to Jackson as a legislator. Now, 34 years later, he will leave public life standing taller than ever, and surrounded by others who have benefited from his courageous service. He will be missed.