The purpose of these grants is to foster the next generation of national service organizations by providing seed money to help new and start-up organizations, and established organizations proposing new = projects or programs, plan and implement new service programs that have the = potential of becoming national in scope. These grants will assist organizations in beginning a federal service program. Although these grants include a = three to six month planning phase, they are not designed to serve as planning grants. This planning phase will be followed by the actual operation of = а program for the remaining period of the grant.=20 =20 Because these grants are designed to expand and build on the good work = of national and community service, it is the intent of Congress that = current and past Corporation grant award recipients are not eligible to apply = for these grants. However, we are asking current and past grantees to help identify organizations that would be eligible for this funding and = encourage them to submit proposals. Proposals are due by 5 p.m. EST, on November = 17. Please check our website at <http://www.cns.gov/whatshot/notices.html> http://www.cns.gov/whatshot/notices.html for additional attachments. In = the next few days we also hope to have FAQ's posted on this website, which = wi11 likely answer any additional questions you have on this competition. =20 For the Next Generation Grants, we are seeking innovative service models that fall under at least one of three service areas: programs that = engage individuals in an intensive commitment to service in communities = (defined as serving at least 40 hours per week); volunteer programs for seniors (age 55+); and programs that connect service with education. As with past Corporation programs, we expect these new programs to engage volunteers = jn service, which result in measurable outcomes to beneficiaries and participants. Since these grants fall outside of the AmeriCorps grant competition structure and funding stream and will likely include = applicants proposing new models for service, many issues under traditional = AmeriCorps program models (such as cost-per-member) will not be applicable.=20 =20 Organizations may focus on various issue areas including, but not = limited to: education, health and human services, homeland security, public = safety, or other critical areas. Additionally, it may be of particular interest = to note that applicants for these grants may target for these funds, either =as service recipients or volunteers, disadvantaged youth/children and = immigrant and refugee populations, among other service areas. We also list several other possible, non-exhaustive, areas where these programs could focus =in their service models in the Notice of Funding Availability. This notice = can
