Hello to our leaders of our great nation the United States of America. In a patriotic attempt to contribute, I would like to introduce and share with you an idea that has come to me in the aftermath of Tuesday's most horribly gruesome and inhumane attack on our precious and beloved homeland.

I envision the creation of what I have termed "The Global League of Liberated Citizens (GLLC)", which would in effect be a democracy-oriented global government.

Goals: To End Terrorism

Means: Provide the Mid-Eastern Citizenry a Voice to the Democratic World (Seeking to Understand)

Educate Mid-Eastern Citizenry about Democracy (Seeking to be Understood)

Create a Win-Win Situation among Global Citizenry with Regard to Foreign

Policies

Propagate Democracy

Members: Current members of the United Nations and any other countries or organizations that support the common goal to put an end to terrorism.

Now, while President Bush asks Mid-Eastern countries to choose sides, I suggest making one of the requirements of showing US support to formally become a member of the GLLC. Member countries would greatly benefit and non-members would suffer appropriately.

Member countries would allow numerous elected representatives to attend regularly scheduled meetings, thus introducing the Mid-Eastern citizenry to the process of voting and to the concept of a government for and by the people, thus propagating democracy in the Middle East.

Activities in the GLLC meetings would be designed first, to seek understanding by the civilized world of the Mid-Eastern citizens, then by the Mid-Eastern citizens of the civilized world. Once understanding has been achieved, activities would then be designed to create a win-win situation for all members in the effort to end terrorism.

Being simply a mathematics teacher from Central Arkansas, I claim no expertise in these matters and deeply hope that you recognize enough potential in the above outline to warrant your consideration and development.

Sincerely,
Helen Teresa

God Bless America
